Regional and Economics Doctoral School

Year of Foundation: 2004

Head of the Doctoral School: Prof. Dr. János Rechnitzer DSc. university professor

The aim of the Doctoral School: is to host and motivate research programmes, which process the regional structure and the economic developments in the Central-Eastern European Region searching for directions for regional cooperations or their obstacles. We intended to take advantage of the spirit of the place, especially its characteristic features provided by the dynamic region of Győr. Here you can find economic and social relationships entwining the developed Western European regions, so their behaviour and operational systems copy their processes. This region is especially suitable for carrying out research in regional, economic or management sciences.

The Doctoral School’s Research Areas: regional sciences, economic- and management sciences.

You can find further information: http://rgdi.sze.hu